Editorial guidance from Social Indicators Research David Bartram, Editor-in-chief

We (the editors) have published an editorial offering guidance for authors, to provide some clarity about how we evaluate manuscripts. This editorial comes in a context of being inundated with manuscripts; we have surpassed 3000 submissions in 2024. We therefore have to be strict in reviewing (externally) only the manuscripts that have good prospects for a positive outcome. We would also encourage the more general idea that authors should have access to a good prior understanding of how editors/journals evaluate papers.

To help in enhancing the likelihood of a positive outcome, we would therefore invite you to consider this publication:

“Towards the Next Fifty Years of Social Indicators Research: Some Guidance for Authors”, Social Indicators Research, 174(1), 2024, <https://link.springer.com/article/10.1007/s11205-024-03401-z>

Ageing and Old Age in Contemporary Society (A Panorama of Swiss Society): Older people are living longer and feeling younger

Jürg Furrer, Monica Budowski, Romaine Farquet, Margherita Geiger Némethi, Jean-François Marquis, Olivier Moeschler, Dominique Oehrli, Christian Suter, and Markus Zürcher (eds). 2024. Neuchâtel: Federal Statistical Office.

The Swiss population is ageing. Life expectancy is rising and after retirement people can look forward to making active use of a number of years in good health (about 15 years on the average). Today, older people (70+ years-old) believe that old age starts at the age of 80; thirty years ago the corresponding age was defined substantially lower: in the mid-1990s older people perceived the beginning of old age at 69 on average. Today, there is increasing diversity in lifestyles and household types in the post-retirement life phase. At the same time persistent inequalities in people's financial situation, health, and social participation are observed.

These are some of the findings published in the 2024 edition of the Panorama of Swiss Society, which focuses on the topic of ageing and old age in contemporary society. Following the tradition of the Swiss Social Report, the Panorama of Swiss Society series, jointly published every four years by the Swiss Federal Statistical Office, the Universities of Neuchâtel and Fribourg and the Swiss Academy of Humanities and Social Sciences, deals with core issues of social change, quality of life and well-being in Swiss society.

About the book

This open access book focuses on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on well-being, happiness and quality of life, taking into account the mediating effects of social inequalities. The volume brings together and into dialogue the different experiences and perspectives of countries and researchers from the Global North and South. Expert scholars from across the world have analyzed empirical data to reveal how the restrictions associated with the pandemic interrupted lives and livelihoods, and how different socio-economic groups and classes have been differently affected by the crisis. The chapters coalesce around four themes: the impact of COVID-19 on subjective well-being, life satisfaction and happiness in a comparative and longitudinal perspective; the impact of COVID-19 on employment and workers' well-being; sociability, civic participation and solidarity during COVID-19; and the impact of COVID-19 on children's and youths' well-being. Engaging with contemporary theoretical debates on well-being, happiness and quality of life, this volume is of interest to scholars working on well-being, happiness and quality of life, global and cross-national studies, the social impact of COVID-19, and on social and economic change.

About this book

This book presents an integrated international exploration of social well-being from a comparative standpoint: how it is framed, how it is perceived by the people, and how it is exploited by the state. It provides a genuine multicultural and multidimensional understanding of social well-being in an Asian context by showing the strength of comparative analysis. The idiosyncrasy of an individual society is reinterpreted through the universality of harmonized data analysis and imaginative discussion of the findings. The book offers the reader a deep understanding of how social well-being is framed in eight Asian countries, how it is contextualized in each society, and how it is correlated with the concept of development and sustainability. Articulated by carefully chosen examples, historical background, and interpretation of the latest data analysis, this book is highly recommended to readers who seek to understand the relationship among the well-being of individuals, national development, and global sustainability.
